HINTS FOR THE CELLAR AND DECANTING OF WINE.

A wine cellar should be dry, thoroughly clean, dark and well ventilated, but not draughty. Temperature 55° to 60° Fahrenheit. An even temperature is most important.

All Wines should be binned away, the bottles laid on their sides, immediately on arrival. This caution must be strictly observed, especially in the case of all Sparkling Wines, as unless the bottles are so placed that the Wine covers the corks, the Wine very soon becomes flat and lifeless. Port should be binned with the splash mark uppermost.

It is natural for all Wines to throw a deposit after some time in bottle. Ports, Clarets and Burgundies should therefore be stood upright in the cellar or dining room for at least twenty-four hours before required, to allow the sediment, or loose crust, to fall to the bottom of the bottle. They should be decanted about 1½ hours before being consumed, and the decanter, with stopper out, left standing in the dining room, to enable the Wine to develop, and also to acquire the temperature of the room. This specially applies to Clarets and Burgundies, as the crust is very light and it is difficult to decant straight from the bin.

White Wines should be allowed to stand upright for a few hours prior to use, in order to allow the sediment peculiar to them to fall to the bottom. White Wines and Champagnes should be served at a temperature of about 40° Fahrenheit. Do not freeze, this kills the flavour of the Wine.

USEFUL RECIPES.

CHAMPAGNE CUP.

To every bottle of Champagne add two bottles of Soda Water, one liqueur glass of Curacao, and a little cucumber peel and powdered ice. This should be made immediately before being required for use.

CLARET CUP.

To one bottle of claret add two bottles of Soda Water, half a lemon cut into slices, a glass of Sherry (dry for choice), one glass of Curacao. Sweeten to taste. Add block ice. A few sprigs of borage will greatly improve the cup.

HOCK OR MOSELLE CUP.

Take one bottle of light Hock or Moselle, add two or three glasses Cherry Brandy, a slice of lemon, a spoonful of finely powdered sugar, and one bottle of aerated water and a large lump of ice. A thin slice of cucumber peel or sprig of borage will flavour and improve the cup.

CIDER CUP.

Take one large or two small bottles of Hunts' Glorious Devon Cider or an equal quantity of Hunts' Draught Cider, one bottle of lemonade or soda water, one wine-glassful of brandy, and the same quantity of Curacao; the peel of one lemon (very thin). A leaf of borage or a little cucumber will impart a pleasant flavour, but should only be allowed to remain in the beverage for about a minute. Sugar can be added to taste, and the whole must be well iced.

N.B.—If an ice pail is available the ice should not be placed in the Cider Cup.

RUM PUNCH

Half-pint Rum,  $\frac{1}{2}$ -pint Brandy,  $\frac{1}{2}$ -lb. sugar, a large lemon,  $\frac{1}{2}$ -teaspoonful nutmeg, 1 pint boiling water. Rub the sugar over the lemon until all the yellow part is absorbed, then place the sugar in the punch bowl, add the lemon juice (free from pips) and mix these two ingredients well together. Pour over them the boiling water, stir well together, add the Brandy and Rum and nutmeg, stir thoroughly and serve.

MARTINI COCKTAIL.

To a small glass of Gin add one dash of Bitters, two dashes of Maraschino and a wine-glassful of Vermouth. If available, add half a tumberful of chipped ice, shake well and strain into a large cocktail glass. Serve with a slice of lemon.

NOTICE.

ALL PRICES ARE STRICTLY NETT.

The Company's Casks and Bottles are vessels to carry Beer, not measures; but care is taken that they contain not less than their reputed quantities.

To keep Beer in good condition, Vent Pegs should be kept tight in the cask, and if removed should be replaced at once.

Before tapping a Cask thoroughly cleanse the tap.

To prevent injury to Casks they should be properly Corked and Spiled, and returned as soon as empty.

EMPTYES.

In view of the considerable value of Casks, Jars, Bottles and Cases, Messrs. H. & G. Simonds, Limited, will be much obliged if Customers will notify them immediately any of these are ready for return.
